Cooking class “Food preservation“

How much knowledge, creativity, and enjoyment is actually involved in preserving food? Preserving and canning are anything but old-fashioned. For generations, fruit, vegetables, and herbs have been preserved to enjoy seasonal treasures all year round. In this workshop, you will learn traditional methods such as canning, pickling, and drying, and discover how simple and versatile food preservation can be. Together with Elisabeth from Obergereuth Hof farm, you will prepare, taste, and experiment - creating items such as take-home apple sauce and a red wine compote. The workshop is complemented by practical tips on using leftovers, interesting stories about food preservation, and a delicious barley soup.

Vegan cooking class

Once often underestimated, vegan cuisine is now a true highlight: aromatic, colorful, creative, and anything but boring. In this cooking class, Barbara and Lorena from Foodlovers show how diverse and enjoyable cooking without animal products can be. Using fresh ingredients, simple ideas, and the joy of cooking together, you will create dishes that impress: tasty spreads, fresh bread, a hearty stew, and many other seasonal specialties, depending on what the season offers. At the end, you will enjoy the freshly prepared dishes together.
